LEARN TO FLY THIS WINTER AT CHICAGO EXECUTIVE FLIGHT SCHOOL

Long lines. Packed airports. Overfriendly TSA screeners.

Luckily, there is a better way to fly over the holidays.

Rather than stew at your gate-shaped Petri dish, commandeer your own plane at the Chicago Executive Flight School, where you can take flight classes and rent aircraft.

Bust out your coolest pair of aviators and let the flight instructors do the rest during hands-on flying lessons that will have you taking off, taxiing aircraft, and talking to the control tower.

From introductory courses to flights that will have you cruising over the Loop or stopping for lunch in Lake Geneva, check out the city as never before in your own 2-seat or 4-seat Cessna.

Before taking to the skies, instruction is held in a comfy office amidst leather sofas, TVs, and a foosball table.

With clear skies and cold, dense air that keeps the ride smooth while boosting the aircraft's horsepower, winter is the best time to learn to fly.

So take a couple classes and roll up to Christmas dinner in your own plane — Santa's sleigh will have nothing on your Cessna.
