

IMBIBING IMPROV

A COMEDY SHOW CALLED THIRSTY FOR A REASON

Unlike sex, improv gets better the more you drink.

If you don't believe us, Thirsty: The Premier Improv Drinking Show runs at the Apollo Theater on Friday and Saturday nights to shed you of any doubt (and sobriety).

It's like Whose Line Is It Anyway? mutated into a foul-mouthed, boxed wine-fueled basement party, as audience members shout out lines that the actors must then recreate.

But it's not just skits they're acting out. It's also drinking games, songs, and team competitions powered by audience suggestion and drunken off-the-cuff banter.

In between scenes, audience actions are determined by the random drawing of cards, so be prepared to step on stage — particularly if it's your birthday.

The professional cast hails from Second City and Improv Olympic, and is clearly drunk by night's end after a fact-paced hour of improv (they're also known to drink with the audience at nearby bars post-show).

So if you like to laugh, come thirsty.
